Providing Guidance at Salisbury

The Challenge

Salisbury had heard that several local NHS Trust Hospitals were using Induction Guidance to distribute clinical guidelines to their doctors and nurses via a mobile app. The Trust wanted to use Induction Guidance to manage the Trust's Policies and Procedures as it would allow them to make a wide range of content available digitally within a single system in a consistent manner, with access via desktop or mobile app.

27,500

Documents migrated on to the MicroGuide platform are accessed over 27,500 times each month.

The Solution

Induction Guidance (formerly known as MicroGuide), is the UK's most widely used clinical guidance platform, providing medical organisations, hospitals, health boards and NHS Trusts with the ability to collaboratively create, edit, and publish their own local guidance and policies

In 2020, we completed the project plan to migrate existing content from Salisbury's disparate systems on to the Induction Guidance Content Management System.

After further discussions, it became clear Salisbury could also use the Induction Guidance platform to manage and distribute patient information through the Patient Information Module of the app.

The Impact

The Trust has now migrated over 1,000 Patient Information Leaflets covering over 40 different medical conditions, such as Diabetes, Surgery, Ear, Nose & Throat, Plastic Surgery and Mental Health. All this information is available to outpatients in real-time via the Salisbury myInformation Mobile App. In addition, the Trust has migrated hundreds of clinical guidelines and non clinical policies on to the MicroGuide platform, all of which can be accessed by Salisbury staff via the MicroGuide Mobile App or on the Trust's Intranet. These are accessed over 27,500 times each month.
